A YEAR OF JOY AND FEELING GREAT IS OUR WISH FOR YOU IN 5768

The calendar tells us that Yom Tov is here
So it's time to send greetings to those we hold dear.
But first let's review some events that were splendid
And share what we did in the year that just ended.

Esther reported on many events
And became Senior Editor of Presentense.
Her blogs covered Jewish and pop culture news
And a JTA column called "Good for the Jews."

By day, Jack managed an internet site
And played with his band at weddings by night.
He found time to start up, with skill and aplomb,
A new Torah website, seventyfaces.com.

Penina put on her best business suit
And started her Washington, D.C. commute.
She used her considerable skills to excel
In lining up grants for national Hillel.

Gil learned how to count and how to eat sushi.
He got lots of hugs from his head to his tushi.
Kissed sabas and savtas (of each he has two)
And hugged most of all his plush kangaroo.

Sim's TV commercials enticed us to buy
Philly-style pizza and carb-free rye.
As a cloud he ate cereal, cold and wet.
He interviewed a cat, a scene not to forget.

Ilana's career took a happy new twist
With a middle school job as a psychologist.
From Manhattan's west side she has a new route
In doing her thrice-weekly Jersey commute.

Murder at the Minyan sales went on and on
And reached the top ten percent at Amazon.
Shuly got great reviews online and in print.
Is another book coming? She won't give a hint.

Al bought old brownstones and clubhouses too.
He sold them on eBay to purchasers who
Were happy to find them so clean and so neat.
Of course they're located on Sesame Street.

Now that you know all about the eight Ks
And just how we spent the last 365 days,
We still have some space left. It isn't too late.
So we wish you a happy 5768.
